

1 KILLED 2 HURT AT ROAD HOUSE FIRE

2 Men Injured and Several Women Slightly Burned In Mysterious Roadhouse Fire

The roadhouse on the Lincoln highway east of Frankfort was destroyed by a mysterious fire early Thursday morning and one man is reported missing and is thought to have perished in the flames, while two other men suffered injuries and several women were slightly burned.

The fire broke out about 4 or 4:30 o'clock while the inmates of the roadhouse were sleeping. The injured men were removed to the Chicago Heights hospital it is said.

The Chicago Heights fire department was called but by the time the chemical truck arrived the building was partly burned down. In an interview with Fire Chief Phillips of the Chicago Heights Fire Department, the chief said that a number of girls from the roadhouse drove to the Chicago Heights police station and reported the fire and asked for help. The Chicago Heights Fire Department was notified at 4:56 o'clock Thursday morning and immediately responded, but when Chief Phillips arrived he found the two story building partly burned to the ground and beyond saving. He saw a number of autos and trucks standing about the place and a number of the roadhouse folk were sitting in the cars in their night clothes. Chief Phillips was told that an old man said to have been a coal miner from West Frankfort, Illinois who has been employed at the roadhouse as a watchman and caretaker of autos, was missing and it was feared he had died in the fire. Chief Phillips was told by some of the inmates of the roadhouse that it is their belief that the building was set on fire from the outside. When the inmates were aroused by the fire and smoke the fire had already made such rapid headway that escape from the burning building was effected with difficulty. It was while seeking to escape from the burning house that two men were injured when they leaped thru windows. Several of the women are said to have been slightly singed while escaping the flames. The ruins being too hot to permit any work no effort could be made to search for the body of the missing coal miner.

This roadhouse was built about four or five years ago on the Will County side of the Will and Cook county line by Tony Augustino, a well known labor leader of Joliet and Chicago Heights and soon after it was opened stories were in circulation of wild parties going on there. One night there was a shooting affair and a foreigner was shot and killed while his assassin escaped and was never apprehended as far as could be learned. The roadhouse was closed for awhile until the excitement was over. It was opened again and run by a Mrs. Collins who was arrested for selling booze and the place was closed for violation of the prohibition act. After being closed for a short time it reopened. It was understood at that time that the owners of the place represented to the Will county authorities that if the place was forced to remain closed no insurance could be secured on the property, and permission was again given to reopen. No one around here seems to know who owns the place now or whether the loss is covered by fire insurance.

This roadhouse has been in the notorious class and the people of this section hope that it will not be rebuilt and that its notorious career is at an end.

Tune: The Prisoner's Song
Joliet's a jolly old jail,
And a jolly old jail it is,
Where the guards the prisoners regale
With tiddle and tiddit,
And it's worth a trip to Joliet
To hear the jailbirds sing
To their Spanish guitars
As they saw the bars
With the saws their sweeties bring.
The prison songs of Sing Sing,
The Volga Boatman's song,
Are nothing to the staves that ring
In Joliet all night long,
The song of the sawmen sawing
Their way to liberty
As the guards encore
And call for more
Of that mad Mex melody.

Wolf Road Trail 300 Years Old

The Most Important North and South Trunk Line Highway In The United States

The Algonquin tribe of Indians inhabiting the Hudson River country in the State of New York during the seventeenth century, were divided into three branches or clans, viz: "Muchqua" (bear), "Mechchaooh" (wolf), and "Toon-paoh" (turtle). In the year 1670, the branch known as "The Wolf" moved to the westward, and finally settled in Indiana and Illinois setting their wigwags along the south bank of the Kankakee River, where they became known as the "Mahingans". In this territory were numerous tribes, chief among which were the "Potawatamies" and the "Iroquois". The "portage" at the point where the cities of Kankakee and Bourbonnais now stand, was called "Theak-A-Ke" or "The Wolf", and the road to the north "Theak-A-Ke", "Ty-Yan-Ac-Ke", a combination of the Mahingan and Potawatamie languages, the liberal translation of which is "The Trail of the Wolf Through The Wonderful Land."

The trail was used by the Jesuit missionaries, the early explorers and the fur traders who came from the east about the year 1818, crossing the Kankakee River at the Indian portage. "Theak-A-Ke" and taking the trail due north to Fort "LaBay" (Green Bay) in Wis. The route became known among the white pioneers, as "Wolf Trail" or "Wolf Road". The Indians called it "The Wolf Road". "The Pathway of the Paleface", and this name it has retained for nearly three hundred years. The above is authentic and has been gathered from records of the Chicago Historical Society and the Newberry Libraries, Chicago, Illinois by Don C. Hall of Mokena, Illinois.

Preserve the tradition of this historic road and construct Route 51 on Wolf Road, beginning at a point east of Wilton Center on Wolf Road (Route 44) due north on Wolf Road to Route 4A on Archer Avenue, thus adding another link to the pavement on Wolf Road.

Mokena People at Honolulu

When the S S City of Los Angeles arrived off Waikiki this morning it was greeted by the booming of big guns. Fort De Russey, one of the six forts on the island of Oahu, was engaged in firing practice and incidentally the passengers of the white liner had a thrill.

As the ship entered the harbor native boys were diving for coins and the Hawaiian band on the dock played sweet island melodies. The quaint old Hawaiian custom of greeting visitors with leis [wreaths] of fragrant flowers was accorded the travelers as they came ashore.

Among those arriving on the S S City of Los Angeles were Mrs. Jessie Sippel and Elmer Sippel, of Mokena, Illinois. The increasing number of tourist who are arriving in Hawaii this month are finding a variety of novel entertainments staged for their benefit. Hawaiian luau [feasts] and Hawaiian concerts are frequently given in private homes and at the hotels. Kite Day is another interesting affair which tourist who arrived on the S S City of Los Angeles will have an opportunity to attend. The small boys of many races compete in kite flying tournaments and exhibitions which are held in lovely Manoa valley.

Many of the passengers from the City of Los Angeles are planning trips to all of the principal islands, to Waimea canyon on Kauai; to Haleakala, the world's largest extinct crater, on Maui; and to the volcano of Kilauea on Hawaii.

Many Witnesses Heard In Election Recount Case

David A. Martin, 304 Winston Ave., Joliet, Illinois, was the first witness called. Mr. Martin was a watcher at the 14th Precinct, Zipf's Brothers Garage, 643 S. Chicago Street, Joliet, Ill. Mr. Martin was under direct examination by Mr. Nadelhoffer and the testimony simplified is this. Mr. Martin arrived at the 14th Precinct about 4:15 p. m. and waited outside until the polls closed and then stepped into the Accessory room where the Judges, clerks, ballot boxes, etc. was. As the judges were about to open the ballot box a colored man came running in and said "here's another one". The man gave his name as Edward Harvey and Mr. Martin testified that it was not the Edward Harvey that he knew. There was another watcher at this precinct watching for the Republican Party. Mr. William Leichty, 1419 E. Washington St. As the ballots were being unfolded Mr. Martin said there were at least 75 or 100 that was smudged but the cross was still evident. Mr. Martin said he objected to these ballots until he was tired and only one of them was thrown out. Mr. Martin said these ballots were smudged in different places. Some in front of Frank L. Smith's name and some Alvah M. Weston's name and in the party circle of the Republican Party and the Light Wine and Beer Party.

The cross examination was conducted by Robert Martin, Attorney for Albert E. Margraf, Mr. Martin wanted to know when the drawing of the garage had been made. Mr. Dave Martin's answer was "Thanksgiving day morning but that it was not to scale. There was much talk as to whether there were two windows or many, the size of the room and whether the booths which were out in the garage proper could be seen thru the glazed glass above the wanicoating. Attorney Martin then read the petition thru asking Mr. Martin questions about the allegations in it. Mr. Martin answered to the contrary to these questions. Mr. Dave Martin is a signer of the petition but the petition is sworn to as information and belief and not as the whole truth. Mr. Martin could not possibly be able to swear to this as being absolutely true because the information has been gained thru the efforts of many persons and compiled together made the petition as a whole. Mr. Martin closed his testimony at noon.

Mr. William Leichty, 1419 E. Washington St., was next called and bore out Mr. Martin's testimony that the ballots were smudged as though they had been rubbed by a finger. Mr. Leichty said one ballot that had been voted for both Weston and Markgraf was laid aside in the window and not counted. Mr. Leichty said he was too busy at his end of the table to watch what Mr. Robert Haley and Mr. Martin were doing at the other end but that he could hear Mr. Martin wrangling about the ballots. On cross examination the usual questions were asked by Mr. Martin.

David Meade, 503 S. Desplaines St., was called and said he had witnessed electioneering at the 14th precinct. A sample ballot marked with a cross in the Republican Circle and a cross in front of Markgraf's name. Mr. Meade said a girl brought two voters to the polls and asked Mr. Haley if they voted there and he said "It makes no difference we are voting them all today". Mr. Meade also said he seen a colored man vote who had no business voting because he was a convict and unable to vote for a period of one year. On cross examination it was brought out that Mr. Meade had signed this man's parole together with the colored minister and at that time he was told not to let him vote for a period of one year.

The following qualified voters living in the 23rd precinct, but voted in the 14th precinct. All said on cross examination that they did not know they were voting at the wrong polling place: Edward Rota, 804 S. Joliet Street; Mrs. Luella Colbert, Henry Colbert, Louis DePra, all of 308 E. McDonough Street.

Tinley Interested In Municipal Band Tax Issue

"If the municipal band did nothing but give us half a dozen concerts during the year, every taxpayer in Tinley Park will have had more than his money's worth from his investment."

In these words does Henry Boldt, leader of the Tinley Park orchestra, sum up the services which a municipal band renders to the community. Mr. Boldt was one of the sponsors of the two-mill tax movement for band purposes, which is to be voted on by local citizens at the April election.

"What a town like Tinley Park needs more than anything else is good, clean, wholesome entertainment that the family may enjoy together," says Mr. Boldt. Nothing so quickly brings people out and in their friendliest mood than open air music of a community or patriotic nature. It is a sociable gathering. People who seldom meet on other occasions not only meet but stop to chat because they have leisure.

And the more people in town who call each other by their first names, the better off the town.

"Half a dozen patriotic concerts during the year will do more for Tinley Park than five times the same money spent on almost any other municipal improvement. And in all probability the band will give us more than this."

"A band supported by voluntary contributions is like a nickel in the slot piano: when the nickels give out, the music stops. And somebody has to get out and pass the hat."

You can't expect a band to amount to much if its members have to be worrying constantly about money. Let's put music in our annual budget by passing the band proposition at the April election, and stop passing the hat.

"The first state that passed the law enabling its cities to support a band by taxation established the fact that a town needs music as it needs civic beauty-parks, boulevards, and handsome buildings, and just as it needs sanitation police protection."

Chicago Live Stock Exchange Endorses Wolf Road

At a meeting of the Mokena Development Association held Tuesday night at the Mokena school, L. G. Bruder, chairman of the publicity committee of this organization read copies of resolutions as passed by the Woodlawn Business Men's Association and the Chicago Live Stock Exchange endorsing the construction of Wolf Road and which were sent Col. C. R. Miller of the State Highway Department.

Chairman Ona E. McGovney and Secretary Herman Schweser being absent, Don C. Hall, Sr., was appointed chairman pro tem and the editor was appointed temporary secretary. The Association voted to have Emil Borges of Mokena paint six large signs with the picture of a wolf on same and the inscription "Wolf Road" these signs to be placed at various vantage points to advertise Wolf Road. The widely known hardware house of Hibbard, Bartlett & Spencer of Chicago, also have endorsed Wolf Road. The agitation in Cook county for the construction of Wolf Road is growing stronger right along. Ed. Cowan of Palos Park was present and his informal talks were much enjoyed. As whole the meeting was a very harmonious one and created a still greater road boosting fever. The next meeting of the Association will be held next Monday evening at the Mokena school house. Everyone welcome.

Frankfort M. E. To Present Play

The Frankfort M. E. church is going to sponsor a home talent play "Grandpa's Millions" at the Frankfort hall Friday, night, April 8 commencing at 8 o'clock. Everyone invited. A good time assured for all.

Alpine and stakes have been driven up to Wolf Road. It is said efforts are being made to have part of this highway come down Wolf Rd in Cook county.

Red Hot Village Election Coming

Both Mokena and Frankfort are looking forward to real hot village elections April 19th. Both villages have two tickets in the field.

Oak Lawn News

The M. W. A. Camp 12054 of Oak Lawn are very grateful to the many friends and neighbors for the way they turned out to see the minstrel show given by them last Friday and Saturday nights and hope everyone enjoyed themselves. A special vote of thanks has been extended to Miss Mary Walsh and her brother Edward Walsh, Mr. Willig from Palos Park, Mr. [Scot ty] Lille of Worth, Miss Stitts of Chicago and Mr. Schrau of Oak Lawn and others for the assistance they gave as all got a great kick out of it. All efforts put forth were well repaid. Harry C. Phillips, the Venerable Consul extends an invitation to all men to join the society and thereby make provision for their loved ones in case of death. He who hesitates may find he is too late.

Michael Hartman is very much improved.

The community is very much grieved over having lost our efficient nurse Miss Irene O'Connor, who will assume the duties of visiting nurse for the Orland district. What is the matter with Mr. Cermak? Why don't the people leave well enough alone? As usual two on three run the town.

Miss Cervenny Dvorak is our new nurse.

We are sorry to learn James Montgomery is not going to file his petition for President of the School Board, a position he has held for a number of years. Mrs. A. H. Behrend is the contesting candidate. Edward Schaller, Messers. Heersma and Walter Hopkins are the other candidates.

Mokena School Election April 9

The annual school election will be held in Mokena next Saturday afternoon, April 9th at the Mokena school from 2 to 4 o'clock. The term of Ona McGovney as school director expires. The school board wishes to have all candidates for this office hand in their names so the ballots can be printed. Mrs. E. P. Krapp has been mentioned as a candidate for school director, but she says she is not in the race and will not accept the office. The field is open so get busy.

er, Mrs. W. Clemens. This coffee promises to be an event out of the ordinary as the ladies are planning a surprise. A large attendance is looked for.

FOR THE INVALID'S TRAY

To the whimsical palate of an invalid, a dainty is far more acceptable whatever it may be, if it is served in some unusual form.

For the busy housewife who has but one pair of hands on which to depend, in performing her various duties, time is a most important consideration, so she has little time for frills.

A few moments spent in arranging and garnishing a dish will make all the difference between its being eaten with pleasure or refused with distaste.

It is not easy for everybody to prepare a dish so that it appeals to the eye; but with little practice the art may be acquired.

So many fetching things may be done with the ordinary foods common in every home. Take the lemon or orange: a whole set of dishes may be made from a few. The lemon has a spout all ready made for a pitcher, cut a ring for a handle, scoop out the pulp, shave off the bottom to make it level and behold a pitcher, not for cream, but for jellies or custards, junket or tapioca. Cut the lemon crosswise, scoop out and put on handles and you have a sugar bowl; cut a smaller lemon the same way, insert a ring for handle and you have a cup. Pigs, using toothpicks for legs, black pins for eyes will delight the heart of a child—a lemon is shaped like the body of a pig.

With dates, figs and raisins flattened and decorated with cloves, all sorts of turtles may be formed. Peanuts with toothpicks will make all kinds of animals and men. Unless one has tried doing these things for a grown person, it will surprise you to see how much these childish toys will please an adult. We are but children at heart and when one is ill, one is ill mentally as well as physically; so simple things please and divert us.

With the varieties of gelatin on the market, with custards and fruits one has a large field in serving the invalid.

The appetite of an invalid usually has to be coaxed with various devices. Often the recovery of a patient depends entirely upon the food which he can eat and assimilate, so the serving of food is a vital thing.

In all homes there are some bits of choice china, glass or silver which may be used to advantage on the invalid's tray. Colored foods like jellies, gelatin desserts and fruits look well in glass.

Fruit Cream.—To the white of an egg unbeaten add a half glass of any sweet jelly; beat until stiff enough to stand and serve with a thin custard or with whipped cream.

Good Sandwiches.

A sandwich is a never failing food and with the great variety from which to choose, one may have something different, without repeating.

Swiss and Spanish Sandwiches.—Spread thin slices of rye bread with prepared mustard and an equal number of slices with mayonnaise dressing; cover half the slices with thinly sliced Swiss cheese and the remaining slices with thin, sliced Spanish onion; spread onion with a thin layer of mayonnaise. Serve with coffee and sliced cold meat at a stag supper.

Ham and Mustard Pickle Sandwiches.—Finely chop cold boiled ham, using enough to fill one cup, mix with one-half cupful of finely chopped mustard pickles. Moisten with salad dressing. Spread bread with horseradish butter, then with the ham mixture, using rye bread.

Cheese and Cherry Sandwiches.—Mix well seasoned cottage cheese with finely minced maraschino cherries. Spread thin slices of white bread with butter, then with the cheese mixture. These are especially nice for an afternoon tea.

Toasted Cheese Sandwiches.—Cut white bread into one-fourth inch slices, spread lightly with mustard butter and sprinkle with grated cheese, cover with a buttered slice and press well together. Arrange on a wire broiler and toast a delicate brown on both sides.

A Dessert Sandwich.—Make a jelly roll, cut into slices and serve for dessert with a thin custard poured over the slices. Serve cold.

Cheese and Pineapple Sandwiches.—Mash a large cream cheese, add one-fourth of a cupful of cream whipped. Add an equal measure of finely chopped fresh or canned pineapple, well drained. Spread thin slices of white bread with mayonnaise, cover half the slices with the mixture and the other half with lettuce, spread with mayonnaise. Put together in pairs, trim off edges and cut into various shapes. Garnish each one with a small piece of pineapple cut into wedge shape; sprinkle with paprika.

Wilt-Resistant Melon Is Tested

Conqueror Found to Be of Very Good Quality and Sold Readily.

Conqueror, the wilt-resistant variety of watermelon developed by the federal Department of Agriculture, not only has proved to be resistant to this serious disease when grown in Illinois but also was found to be a very good quality and sold quite easily, especially to the local trade, according to H. W. Anderson, associate chief of pomological pathology at the college of agriculture, University of Illinois, who had charge of the test. In many cases, the trade preferred the Conqueror melon to the Tom Watson, which has recently been the favorite market melon. The test of the wilt-resistant variety is being made in White county, where the horticultural department of the agricultural college has been growing the variety for the past three years.

Conqueror Is Ready Sale.

The ready sale of the Conqueror melon and its high resistance to wilt has encouraged growers to continue planting it, and many will give it a trial this season, according to Anderson. A limited amount of seed of the variety may be obtained from White county farm bureau.

Watermelon wilt, against which the Conqueror variety is resistant, is a soil-carried disease and in many of the old watermelon-growing sections of Illinois it has become so severe that the growing of melons has had to be abandoned. The disease lives for many years in the soil, with the result that when land once becomes infested it cannot be used for at least ten years for growing melons.

Development of Conqueror.

The Conqueror melon was developed a number of years ago in an effort to meet the situation. At that time the round type of melon was popular. Later the long type, such as the Tom Watson, was introduced and became the favorite market melon. For this reason, the wilt-resistant variety known as the Conqueror was almost forgotten. Recently when the wilt became so bad that it eliminated the melon industry from many sections, growers sought relief through their farm advisers and the agricultural college. In an effort to help solve the problem, the college started testing the Conqueror variety in White county for the purpose of finding out whether or not it was resistant under Illinois conditions and whether or not it would meet the existing market demands.

Lead Arsenate on Apples Removed by New Solution

An efficient and inexpensive method of removing excessive arsenical residues from apples sprayed for the control of the codling moth has been devised by the Colorado experiment station. The details of this method, worked out by Dr. Wm. P. Headdon, chemist, appear in "Removal of Arsenate of Lead From Sprayed Fruit," recently published as Press Bulletin 63.

According to the bulletin, the new solution is cheap, quick-acting, effective, and causes no bad effects upon the fruit. It is made by taking four pounds each of soda ash and ordinary table salt and dissolving them in one hundred pounds of water. This solution can be used in either wooden or iron vessels. It should be heated to 100 degrees Fahrenheit, but should not be raised materially above that temperature.

Enough apples are then added to the solution to cover the surface thickly. The apples should be stirred gently with a mop or some equivalent instrument, care being taken not to bruise them. The stirring should be continued for ten minutes. On removal from the bath the apples should be rinsed to remove the wash liquid.

Farm Hints

High yields are made, not born of chance.

It is a wise farmer who knows his own planting seed.

Grow trees while you wait; you are going to wait anyway.

Blessed is the farmer who trusteth in legumes, for his soil shall be enriched.

Rye seed that is more than a year old cannot be depended on to give a good stand of grain.

Where soil fertility is a problem the absence of a legume in the rotation hastens the date of the sheriff's sale.

The enthusiastic gardener thinks that "a little too much is just about right" in the matter of quality of vegetables.

Sweet clover hay has feeding value almost equal to alfalfa. Although more of it is wasted, it is still an economical feed at $6.50 a ton.

A farm machinery hospital saves time and money and during cold winter and early spring days is a very busy place for the successful farmer.

McGraw Watches His Hirelings

Siren Jeopardizes

Jack Dempsey's Job

Jack Dempsey may lose his position as deputy fire marshal, to which he was appointed three months ago, as a result of an investigation begun by the Los Angeles police commission to determine under what authority the former heavyweight champion equipped one of his automobiles with a siren and red lights.

Dempsey declared, following the opening of the investigation, that he has not used the fire siren on his car since it was installed after his appointment as a deputy fire marshal.

Both the Los Angeles fire chief and the chief of police said they had not given the boxer permission to equip his automobile with siren and lights such as used by police and fire cars.

Naval Star to Coach

Frank H. Wickhorst, whose home is in Chicago, was captain of the 1926 football team at the United States Naval academy, and it is announced by Paul E. Bolting, director of athletics at the University of Iowa, that Wickhorst has been engaged as line coach. Wickhorst will report to Iowa for active duty September 15. He was an all-American tackle in 1926.

Dual Agreement Places Limit Upon Activities

President John Grier Hibben, at the alumni luncheon at Princeton, said the dual athletic agreement with Yale embodies the phrasing of the old "Big Three" agreement except for the fact Harvard is not listed as a party to it. Thus, except for the new clause, Princeton's athletics of the future will be guided by regulations that have been in existence for the past three or four years.

The new rule does not prohibit such post-season activities as the track meets with Oxford and Cambridge, but is designed to keep the institutions from engaging in such contests as the Tournament of Roses annual at Pasadena, to which the football teams of both Yale and Princeton have been invited in the past.

Gene Tunney Holds Many Honors Now, It Appears

If Gene Tunney holds the title a few years and continues being enrolled as an officer until then, at the rate up to the present time, he'll belong to everything but the Swiss navy.

Gene already has enough badges and titles and enough authority to arrest about 10,000,000 people—if they break the law.

He's a deputy sheriff in New York, a captain of police in Minneapolis, a deputy county clerk in Brooklyn, a "cop" in many New York and New Jersey towns, a constable here, a detective there, an officer in this military company, a member of that, a motorcycle cop in three communities and some sort of deputy officer elsewhere.

Sport Notes

England has 1,750 tennis clubs with 175,000 members.

Horse racing was introduced in the Olympic games in Greece in 648 B. C.

Harvard and Yale rowing crews have met each other for the past 70 years.

No winter sports were included in the Olympic games program previous to 1920.

The Pacific Coast Yachting association will not hold a Honolulu race this year.

An international rowing regatta will be held at Ems, Rhineland, Germany, July 23 and 24.

Many British golf professionals have recently secured lucrative positions with clubs in Germany.

Father P. J. Lennon of New York has played golf with John D. Rockefeller for the past 20 years.

Athletes, professional and amateur, are opposed to having their pictures taken before important contests.

The swimming pool of the United States Naval academy at Annapolis, Md., is the largest in the country.

Rene Lacosta, aged twenty-two, the new world's tennis champion, was the youngest member of the French Davis cup team.

Jack Blair, nineteen-year-old first baseman of West Palm Beach, Fla., has been signed by the Washington Americans.

The world champion St. Louis Cardinals include five different minor league clubs for the development of young players.

Maurice Cassidy, nineteen-year-old St. Louis Muny league player, has signed with the Moline club of the Mississippi Valley league.

A total of 4,950,000 baseball fans attended games in the National league last season. The Chicago Cubs led with more than 800,000.

Catcher Firman "Bill" Warwick of the Cardinals has been released to Syracuse of the International league on an optional agreement.

Major Goodsell, of Australia, holder of the world's sculling championship, has been challenged to a match for the title by H. A. Barry, of England.

Frank (Lefty) O'Doul is back with his old team, the San Francisco Seals, having been purchased from Hollywood for a price said to have been $7,500.

Every team in the American league is seemingly making the claim that it has been strengthened 100 per cent, which ought to make them finish in the same order as last year.

The Victoria cricket team in Australia is the only team which has ever made 1,000 runs in first-class competition, recently totalling 1,107 against New South Wales.

When Burleigh Grimes signed his contract with the Giants, he remarked, "It is the first time in my career that I ever signed a contract on the day I received it, but I'm well satisfied."

Speaker is at least 30 per cent more efficient than Cobb as an all-round player, say American league players. Cobb is as good as ever at the bat, but in all other departments of play Speaker is superior.

James McKeag has been elected president of the Big Ten Country club, organized for alumni of Big Ten colleges. C. W. Cleveland is vice president, Lyman Sherwood secretary and Basil I. Peterson treasurer.

The suit which Carley Hoff, the Norwegian athlete, brought against the Amateur Athletic union, involving $500,000 damages, has ended by a compromise settlement on expense money amounting to about $900.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Answering Christ's Call.

I. Jesus Preaching in Galilee (vv. 14, 15).

The reason for Christ changing from Judea to Galilee was the growing opposition to Him. He accepted the fate of John, the Baptist, as foreshadowing His own death. The rejection of the forerunner meant the rejection of Him whose advent he heralded.

1. What He preached (v. 14).
The gospel of the kingdom of God which meant the good news of the near approach of the kingdom of God when the rule of God as predicted by the prophets would be realized.

2. How He preached it (v. 15).
(1) "The time is fulfilled and the kingdom of God is at hand."

This meant that the time had now come for the appearance of the Messiah and the establishment of His kingdom.

(2) "Repent."
This meant that the people should turn around, change their minds and attitude toward Christ and accept Him as their King. The message of repentance is one which needs to be sounded out today.

(3) "Believe the gospel." Then, as now, men needed to believe the gospel of Christ.

II. Jesus Called Peter and Andrew to Become Fishers of Men. Jesus called this pair of brothers for service in His kingdom. It is usually best to perform the Lord's service in pairs. This has a threefold value. It makes testimony effective; it provides fellowship on the part of workers and protection of the witnesses. It is to be noted that these men had previously been called to be disciples of Christ (John 1:36-42). They are now called to service. Observe:

1. From what they were called (v. 16).

They were called from positions of definite service. They were fishers. God always chooses His servants from the ranks of the employed.

2. To what they were called (v. 17).
To be "fishers of men." They no doubt had been successful fishers. The qualities which made them good fishermen, namely, patience, bravery to face the storm and darkness of the night, and perseverance, which led them to toll all night though no fish were caught, would make them good fishers of men.

3. Their obedience (v. 18).
"Straightway they forsook their nets and followed Him."

To obey meant sacrifice, painful separation, the giving up of all business interests and leaving father behind. Regardless of the cost, they yielded prompt obedience.

III. Jesus Entering Simon Peter's House (vv. 29-31)

Soon after the call of Peter and Andrew, Jesus called James and John, after which they entered the synagogue at Capernaum, where He cast out an evil spirit. This miracle caused His fame to be spread abroad.

1. A loved one ill (v. 30).
When Jesus entered this home He found Peter's mother-in-law with a burning fever. We know that among the closest followers of Jesus there are suffering ones and anxious and burdened hearts. To all such Jesus comes with loving sympathy and power to help.

2. "They tell Him of her" (v. 31).
This was the proper thing to do. We should bring to the attention of Jesus those of our families who have need of bodily or spiritual healing.

3. He healed her (v. 31).
"He came and took her by the hand and lifted her up." This act showed the nearness, sympathetic tenderness and power of Jesus. At His touch the fever departed and strength was imparted to her body.

4. "She ministered unto them" (v. 31).
This act shows:

(1) That the cure was instantaneous and complete. When Jesus heals there is no halfway business.

(2) Gratitude on the part of the one healed. She thus expressed her appreciation of what Jesus had done. All those who have experienced the healing power of Jesus will express their gratitude in loving service to the Lord and His disciples.

God's Indulgence

God is not over-indulgent. He is too loving for that. Because He loves us, and plans for our growth, He cannot let our faults go without correction. His justice stands side by side with His mercy, and cannot be evaded or left out of account.—Southern Methodist.

Finding Strength

Where shall we find strength for practical separation to God, except in God Himself—Echoes.

Solomonic Verdict

German newspapers comment upon the Solomonic wisdom displayed by Polish authorities, in the part of Upper Silesia assigned to Poland, following the plebiscite.

A pro-German couple had applied to the school authorities for permission to send their twin children to the German minority school. After due deliberation the school board decided that Maricka, the girl, was of German origin and, consequently, might be enrolled in the German school, but that Seflik, her twin brother, was of pure Polish descent and must be sent to the Polish school.—New York Times.

Napoleon Bonaparte (Part II)

FOR the son of a Corsican lawyer to plan a world empire, nowadays, would be sheer insanity. But in Napoleon Bonaparte's time and country almost anything was possible to the man who knew how to use his chances. Tavern waiters became field marshals; servants rose to dukes. For the first time in France's history it was the man, not his ancestry, that counted. Bonaparte, being the greatest genius in France, rose highest in the mighty upheaval that followed the overthrow of old customs. Having, as first consul, set matters to rights at home, he drew sword against all Europe. Hereafter long, time-wasting campaigns and acres of red tape had marked every war. Bonaparte changed all this. Whirlwind campaigns and defiance of all outworn military traditions formed the keynote of his warfare. On May 13, 1800, he hurried an army across the Alps, captured Piedmont by a brilliant victory over the Austrians at Marengo, June 14, and dictated peace terms to Austria. Other countries, scared by the example, followed suit, and, for the first time in many years, universal peace seemed established all over the civilized world.

Meantime, in France, Bonaparte was forwarding his personal ambitions to such good effect that, when the project of crowning him emperor of the French was broached, it was carried by a popular vote of 3,000,000 to 3,000. He sent for Pope Pius VII to crown him at Paris amid imposing ceremonies, December 2, 1804, but at the last moment he snatched the imperial diadem from the pope's hands and crowned himself. He then placed the crown on the head of Josephine, his wife. The following year he became king of Italy as well.

And now came a change of character so remarkable as to support the old rumor that Bonaparte the general and Napoleon the emperor were two different men. From being shy, lean and silent, Napoleon grew assertive, fat, talkative. The rigid, temperate simplicity of early days gave way to court etiquette, pomp and imperial splendor. His court was brilliant and extravagant.

England, resenting certain of France's annexations, declared war, and Napoleon prepared to invade Great Britain. But Russia, Austria and Sweden formed an alliance with England and the plan was changed. Napoleon, with 180,000 men, crossed Bavaria, took Vienna and met the combined Austrian and Russian armies at Austerlitz. Each of the three armies was commanded by an emperor. After a long and bloody battle Napoleon defeated the allies with fearful loss. He then thrashed Prussia at Jena and Auerstadt and captured Berlin. Russia's army was marching to Prussia's aid, but Napoleon met and overwhelmed it at Friedland, June 14, 1807, and forced the czar to sue for peace. He next conquered Spain and Portugal, and extended his conquests throughout the continent of Europe. He made his brother king of Spain and his brother-in-law king of Naples, and lavished similar royal honors on others of his family.

Spain, dissatisfied that a low-born Corsican should rule it, revolted. England and Portugal allied themselves with the Spaniards and the "War of the Peninsula" began; the English army being commanded by Sir Arthur Wellesley, afterward duke of Wellington. Austria took this time to rise against Napoleon. The emperor hurried an army across the frontier and inflicted a crushing defeat on the Austrian host at Wagram, July 6, 1809, and dictated humiliating terms of peace to the beaten country. Nearly all the world was now at the Corsican genius' feet.

Yet he was far from satisfied. He saw that he held his sovereignty through sheer strength; Austria's action had taught him that the instant his back was turned the beaten nations would spring at him like wild animals at their trainer. He knew that, even while kings and countries cringed to him, they secretly despised him as an upstart. Only so long as he could overawe foes by active, aggressive power could he hope to retain his mastery.

He had no son to inherit his title. Moreover, he now saw his boyish mistake in having married a stupid woman of the people. He had long since outgrown his early adoration for the fickle Josephine. He calmly proceeded to divorce her, and on March 11, 1810, he married the Archduchess Marie Louise, daughter of the emperor of Austria. The proud Austrian monarch had no choice but to submit, and to sell his daughter for the sake of his country's welfare. Marie Louise cared nothing for her imperial bridegroom, and in his later days of adversity promptly deserted him. They had one son, who, while in his cradle, was proclaimed king of Rome. This son died of consumption at twenty-one.

The years 1810 and 1811 marked the flood-tide of Napoleon's prosperity. His dominions extended from Naples to Denmark. He was proclaimed ruler of Spain, Italy, Switzerland, Holland and most of the German states. Russia, Austria and other nations were at his feet. England alone held out against him. Never before or since has such tremendous authority been vested in one man.

Tanlac Responds to Call For Relief From Pain

Amazing Improvement in Miss Haberbusch's Health Surprises Friends. Boils and Other Troubles Caused by Nervousness and Upset Stomach Relieved. Gains 15 Pounds

Thousands of Illinois men and women suffering from nervousness and run-down condition may discover the surest way to get quick relief in the experience of Miss Mary Haberbusch, 2821 Prairie Avenue, Chicago, whose marvelous recovery from a long siege of suffering surprised everyone.

"If you are tired and fagged-out; if your stomach rebels at taking food and you spend miserable hours doubled up with pain caused by indigestion; if you do not sleep soundly and dizzy spells attack you when you stoop over; if you are losing weight and feel old—watch out!

"Three years ago I was in a run-down weakened condition," says Miss Haberbusch. "Suffering from indigestion, being unable to sleep and getting up in the morning after a long night of tossing and turning, tired, sapped my strength. Poisons swept through my system and bad blood caused boils that pained terribly and compelled me to carry my arm in a sling. I sought relief but failed. Then a friend told me of Tanlac. The first bottle gave me an appetite. Indigestion and boils gradually disappeared. I began to sleep better and arise refreshed. Soon my nerves calmed down. I took on weight. Thanks to Tanlac. It restored my health."

Thousands have found happy relief from pain and gained new strength by taking Tanlac. It usually builds up the body, wipes out causes of poisons. Heed their advice. Keep well, keep youth and health—take Tanlac. Get your first bottle of Tanlac from your druggist today! Over 40 million bottles sold.

Artichoke Sugar

Levulose, called the finest of all sugars, is prophesied from artichokes at 2 cents a pound within five years, as the result of further experiments by the United States bureau of standards. Crystallization of the levulose from a water solution marks the turning point of the bureau's experiments, for in all previous work treatment with alcohol was necessary. The new development, says Popular Science Monthly, may place artichoke sugar on the same footing with cane or beet sugar as a commercial process.

Ton in Spadeful

If the stars being studied by the astro-physicists could be weighed actually, instead of by mathematical computation, it would be found that a spadeful would weigh a ton. The stars are accordingly much denser than the earth. The earth is said to be only about five and a half times as heavy as water.

There was a vote in the 14th precinct in the name of one John Bianco. Attorney P. Francis Boetto was called to the stand and testified that he had probated a will in the name of Giovanna Bianco who had died in March 1924. Giovanna is Italian but translated into English is John. Mr. Boetta said he knew of no other John Bianco but that such a thing as another was possible.

The name of one Fred Corbin was on the poll book and Fred Corbin 403 1/2 Desplaines St., testified that he did not vote on election day and that the only Fred Corbin he knew was his son who lives on the west side.

The name of one Edward Harvey was the lost vote on the poll book and Edward Harvey, 409 S. Chicago St., testified that he did not vote on November 2, and if he had he would have voted in the 23rd precinct. Mr. Harvey said it was possible for an Edward Harvey to be living on the south side of Ontario St., but that he did not know of any.

County Clerk Albion F. Delander was called to the stand and showed the poll books of the 14th precinct for the years 1922-24 and 26. The number of votes polled in 1922 was 412 at the November election. The November election in 1924 was 544 and the November election in 1926 was 708.

Charles E. Spears, 216 Miller Ave., testified that he had personally examined the poll books and registration books of the 14th precinct after election and found 643 names registered 708 voted and of the persons voted 382 names were not registered in the registration book.

William J. Bolton, 1422 Wilcox testified that he went to the 1st precinct about 7:30 or 8:00 p. m. and entered by the rear door and saw a certain William "Spike" Laughran with a pile of ballots on a west table. Mr. Laughran's hand was under a number of ballots and he had a pencil in his right hand. He was standing within a yard of Rudolph Turk, a judge of election, but to the west. Mr. Bolton testified that earlier in the day Mr. Laughran said they were going to win this election by "Fair means or foul". This was said in front of the 32d precinct at No. 4 Engine house, Ohio and Collins St.

Frank Pennuto, 822 Columbia St., testified that at 7:15 a. m. he and William "Spike" Laughran had an argument at No. 4 Engine House in the 32nd precinct and he said they would win or steal the election. Mr. Laughran was working for Brennan and Markgraf.

Wilhelmina Muller, 1409 Cora St. was called to the stand and testified that she has only been in the country two years and had not received her papers as yet.

Jacob Getson, 1315 Oakland Ave. testified that he had voted.

Fred Poole, 1509 N. Nicholson St., was called and testified that his sister Elizabeth Poole was not in the city the day of November 2nd, and that the only Poole's in the 1st precinct were related and there was no other Elizabeth Poole.

Fred Van Ham, 1411 Oakland Ave., a clerk of the Board of Election in the first precinct, was called and testified that several affidavits were taken but that they burned the affidavits instead of returning them to the Town Clerk.

Helen Hollerbach, 1407 Nicholson St., testified that she moved from Duquoin, Ill., and had only been here six weeks when the election was held. She said she told Judge Hinz this but was allowed to vote.

Herbert Teufer, 1412 Oakland Ave., a Republican watcher at the first precinct testified that William "Spike" Laughran was at the first precinct from 7:00 to 7:45 p. m., and that he had a pile of ballots in front of him about six or eight inches high and that he was running his left hand under the ballot at the lower left hand side and tapping with a pencil in his right hand on top of the pile of ballots. When asked how any ballots he had run his hand under he said at least an inch and one half or more of them.

Tim Sullivan, who lived at 866 Scott St., but who had moved to the west side last summer testified that he did not vote at the 25th precinct on November 2, but the name of Tim Sullivan had been voted.

Joseph Plese, Moran and Summit Streets who was a judge in the 25th precinct was called and testified as to the location of the booths being in the room behind the partition but that the booths were set in a semi circle and the only way in or out was through a door 37 1/2 inches in width. Mr. Plese testified that all the booths could not be seen by any one judge at the same time.

Anton Crjkovich, 1224 Cora St., who lived at 909 Scott St., and moved October 4, to his present address voted at the 25th precinct and was of the belief that he had not lost his vote.

More witnesses are to follow and some have given a written statement to the attorney's for the plaintiffs but have not been located due to the fact that nobody seems to know their whereabouts but in the event they are unable to be located to testify before the close of this case this paper will publish the statements as written and signed by witnesses.

Sheriff Markgraf testified that William Barns was a Republican judge and Wm. Brockman was a Republican judge 14th precinct. Mr. Barns was appointed a Deputy and Wm. Brockman's brother Fred Brockman, was appointed a deputy. Mr. Brockman is a relative of Sheriff Markgraf.

"The Big Parade"

"The Big Parade," King Vidor's picturization of Laurence Stallings' story of the late war will be shown at the ORPHEUM THEATRE JOLIET, MARCH 31, APRIL 1, 2. The prices at the matinees will range from 50 cents to $1.10 and at night from 50 cents to $1.65, tax included. Seats are now selling for all performances and we suggest that you purchase them in advance as the demand for them is great.

The presentation here is made by a touring company carrying a large orchestra, an expert mechanical staff and a carload of effects.

For the benefit of the uninitiated, the scene starts in America where Jim, the hero, enlists for the front in 1917-18. He and his buddies go to France where they are billeted in the haymow of a farm house. Jim falls in love with Melisande, the farm girl, and his affection is reciprocated. At the departure for the front, they pledge their vows and in default of any other souvenir, Jim throws her one of his shoes, which she presses to her bosom. With his buddies, Bill and Slim, Jim goes through Belleau Wood, the campaign of the Argonne and many experiences in the trenches and shell-holes, finally crawling out into No Man's Land and finding one of his buddies slain. He then defies the whole German army and attacks single-handed a machine gun nest which he captures, but is subsequently wounded and sent to "Blighly". On learning that the village of Champillon where he was billeted has been the scene of warfare, he manages to escape from the hospital but finds Melisande and her folks gone. So naturally he returns to America. He is now crippled, having lost his leg in the war. There is a ray of sunshine for his sorrowing mother who sees his loss and also knows that his American sweetheart has gone back on him, when Jim says: "Mother, there is a girl in France". Somewhat later Jim returns over the hill back of Champillon and finds the girl and her mother as plow women in the field. Long before he sees her, she sees him, and goes to him.

John Gilbert is the star with Renee Adreese as the featured player and Karl Dane and Tom O'Brien as Gilbert's buddies. Others in the cast are: Hobart Bosworth, Claire McDowell, Claire Adams, Robert Cher and Rosita Marstini. "The Big Parade" is in its second year at the Astor Theatre, New York, and is on view in most of the capitals of the world.

M.E. Church Notes.
Glen T. Beaty, Pastor.
Church School 10:30 a. m.
Evening Preaching Service 7:00 p. m.

The pastor will preach on the subject "Jesus, the Man of Understanding", next Sunday evening. Palm Sunday evening, the subject will be: "Jesus, the Crucified".

Our Sunday School will enjoy a short and very fine program Easter Sunday Morning at 10:30, given by the Primary and Beginner's Departments under the supervision of Miss Muri Hacker and Mrs. Wm. Semmler. If there are babies to be baptised, we feel that this would be a very beautiful time to perform the Sacrament. We invite all parents and those interested in our Sunday School to attend this service, not as an elaborate program but as a service of Easter Consecration.

The Sunday after Easter, April 24th, The M. E. Church is producing a very fine Pageant entitled "The Rock". This is a dramatic telling of the beautiful story of Peter. Miss Viola Hall has charge of the production. Watch for further announcements, you will not wish to miss this service.

Rations for Fighters

During the World war the German soldiers were supplied with tea and coffee without milk. Small rations of rum and arrack were furnished to troops in field and camp. These rations were given out in the evening to be mixed with the tea. Fifteen to twenty men received one bottle. In times of great physical exertion, the allowance of sugar was increased.

The wedding of James George Keleher to Miss Helen Anita Sewell March 17 in Chicago, was a pretty affair. The bride was charming in a gown of white chiffon trimmed with brilliants. She wore a flowing veil of tulle caught with orange blossoms and lilies of the valley, which were sent her by a relative from California.

Mr. Wayne Martin acted as best man, and Miss Catherine Newman as maid of honor. She was delightful in a pink chiffon gown. She wore one of the late style pink taffeta hats. The brides mother wore flesh chiffon with pearl trimming. Mrs. Keleher, the groom's mother was striking in black satin and duchess lace.

The church was filled with many relatives and guests of the young couple.

Following a brief service, the bridal party was taken to the future home of the bride and groom in Chester Highlands where a wedding dinner was served by the Palmer House Catering Co.

Decorations were in green and white with a gorgeous wedding cake as center piece, to the long table sparkling in silver and cut glass.

The happy couple received gifts two numerous to mention. Sterling silver dinner service, Imported linen, glass and embroidery, as well as a large amount of money. The newly weds departed after the dinner amid a shower of rice for a short honeymoon, whither we know not.

ORLAND

Orland M. E. Church, Notes, Elmer L. Setterlund, Pastor.

Friday April 8th the moving picture is "Let's Get Married". No picture on the 15th for this is Good Friday.

Sunday April 4th Bible School at 9:30 a. m. Morning worship at 10:30 a. m. Evening service at 7:30.

We will have the first of a set of pictures on the Life of Christ. The second set will be given the following Sunday evening and the concluding set on Sunday evening the 17th, Easter Sunday.

On Easter Sunday morning there will be a special Easter program given by the Sunday school which will be followed immediately by an Easter service.

Passion week services will be in co-operation with the churches of Palos Park and Worth.

Further announcement later.

On Sunday evening March 27th a union intercommunity service of Worth and Orland was held at the Orland M. E. Church. There was special music by Lester Mahaffy, representing the Orland church and a selection was given by the Worth Choir. The Rev. Paul Sanders of the Worth Community church preached the sermon of the evening. He stressed the fact that so many people have "hard faces" showing the pressure of life which the result of maladjustment in their lives. This maladjustment is largely due to lack of a vital faith in God.

Most people live drab, prosaic lives because the glow of a vital religious faith is lacking. This Easter season should give birth to a faith in those of us in whom it is lacking. The pastor of the Orland M. E. Church presided at this service. There was a very good attendance and all expressed their appreciation of the service.

Next month, April 24th the pastor of the Orland M. E. Church is invited to give a stereopticon lecture on Japan at the intercommunity service to be held at Worth.

Mr. A. W. Lind of the University of Chicago was a guest at the M. E. parsonage for a couple of days last week during the spring recess at the University of Chicago.

Plans for the Holy Week services are progressing signally. The choir is practicing a new Mass. The children are advancing well in their processional exercises, song and for processional exercises, song and march for Holy Thursday. Three little flower girls to scatter petals, have been chosen to lead the Blessed Sacrament procession. Rev. Wm. Goey has the repository almost completed.

The ladies of the parish were greatly pleased with the proceeds of their lunch at the John Bremner sale. The amount totaled sixty dollars. The officers of the Altar and Rosary Society were assisted by Mrs. Al. Schelling, Mrs. W. Gray, Mrs. John Wagner, Miss Marie Smith and the Misses Mary and Viola Bremner. This aid was greatly appreciated as it takes quite some running to sell sixty dollars worth of dime goods.

Stella Gotham celebrated her 14th birthday March 20. Friends came from Gary and Blue Island to honor the event. Dinner was served at 2 p. m. after which games were played. She received many lovely gifts.

Mr. Ed. Henke celebrated his birthday March 19. Bunco and five hundred was played.

Mrs. Ruth Bettenhausen is entertaining old friends of Mrs. Zoimer, who is spending a few days here before returning to her home in Wisconsin.

Mr. Carl Manke, died at his residence in Chicago Heights, Ill. a short time ago. He was an Uncle of Mrs. Peter Wannemacher and Mr. Wm. Manche Sr. at Tinley Park Ills. He was well known in Mokena, Tinley Park, Coopers Grove and Homewood.

Some thirty years ago he owned a Pits horse power and a Rumley separator, with this outfit he did most of the threshing in the vicinity of the four corners of the Townships of Frankfort, Orland, Rich and Bremen, through Cooper's Grove to Homewood into the Townships of Thornton and Bloom. The grain was all stacked in those times, and threshing season would last about five months. About forty-five years ago Mr. Manche bought a Rumley Engine and separator from Mr. Carl F. Vogt, who was in the implement business at New Bremen, now Tinley Park, at that time.

The machine was started on Vogt farm where the big house still stands and hundreds of farmers and sight seeing people came to see the engine run. It was the first steam outfit sold and started in that vicinity. Mr. Manche was a good thresher and through that had made a good many friends. He was liked by every one who knew him.

The DOOM TRAIL

W.N.U. SERVICE

"Here," he said, "you may find my warrant from the king himself to exercise what powers I deem necessary along the frontier. Only the governor-general may overrule me."

Joncaire studied the paper. "That is so," he admitted. "But I tell you this, De Veulle, you have a bad record on the frontier for a trouble-maker. But for you I should have had the Senecas and Onondagas in our interest before this. I write to Quebec by the first post, demanding a check upon your activities. We have too much at stake to permit you to jeopardize it."

"At De-onun-de-ga-a it is known that Ta-wan-ne-ars and his brother Ormerod journeyed to Jagara," interposed the Seneca in his own language. "Does Joncaire think the Senecas will be quiet when one of their chiefs is given up to the Keepers of the Doom Trail for torment?"

"The Senecas will be told that you never reached Jagara," replied De Veulle before Joncaire could speak.

Joncaire turned to me. "Well, my Jean," he said soberly, "whatever your name may be, you have gotten yourself into a nasty mess. You will be lucky if you die quickly. My advice to you is to pick the first chance to die, no matter how it may be. These Keepers—peste! They are a bad lot. They are artists in torment. 'Tis part of their religion, which I will say they still practice, even though Pere Hyacinthe were to excommunicate me."

As he was about to climb the stairs De Lery had ascended, De Veulle called him back.

"One moment! Speaking officially, Monsieur de Joncaire, I desire you to send out belts to all friendly tribes, summoning them to a council-fire which will be held here by the king's command in August."

Joncaire bowed. "It shall be done," he said. "Now then—De Veulle addressed me—"we will consider your case. Are the bands sufficiently tight?"

I had been bound with strips of rawhide which cut into every muscle. The question was superfluous.

"Pick them up," he said to the Cahnuagas. "We will get back to the canoes."

Despite the tightness of my bonds and the numbness they induced, I fell asleep, rocked by the easy motion of the canoe as it was driven along by the powerful arms of the Cahnuagas.

CHAPTER IX

La Vierge du Bois

A dash of water awakened me. One of the Cahnuagas was leaning down, his hideous face close to mine, his fingers wrestling with the knots in the rawhide bonds.

"You cannot lie idle, my distinguished guest," called De Veulle from his place at the stern. "You must keep us dry."

As the rawhide strips were unwound I was able to sit up and look over the frail bark side. We were out of sight of land, and a moderate breeze was raising a slight swell, the crest of which occasionally broke over our bow. In the other canoe Ta-wan-ne-ars already was at work with a bark scoop.

All of that day we were isolated on the restless surface of the huge inland sea. Just before dusk of the second day we sighted a rocky coast, and sheered away from it. On the sixth day we passed out of the lake into the narrow channel of the great river, and landed in the evening at a palisaded post on the southern bank.

So far I had been treated fairly well. My captors had shared with me their meager fare of parched corn and jerked meat; and if I had been compelled to bale out the canoe incessantly, it was equally true that they had labored at the paddles night and day. But now everything was changed. My legs were left unbound, but with uncanny skill the savages lashed back my arms until well-nigh every bit of circulation was stopped in them and each movement I was forced to make became an act of torture. The one recompense for my sufferings was that for the first time since our capture I had the company of Ta-wan-ne-ars, and I was able to profit by his stoical demeanor in resisting the impulse to vent my anger against De Veulle.

"Say nothing, brother," he counseled me when I panted my hate. "For every word you say will afford him satisfaction."

"I wish I had staved in the canoe in the middle of the lake," I exclaimed bitterly. "What is this place? Where are we?"

Ta-wan-ne-ars looked around the landscape, rapidly dimming in the twilight.

"This place Ta-wan-ne-ars does not know," he replied. "Yet it is on the river St. Lawrence, for there is no other stream of this size. I think brother, that De Veulle is taking us to La Vierge du Bois."

"It matters little where he takes us," I returned ill-naturedly. "Our end is like to be the same in any case. Joncaire told me all I sought to know of Jagara—but he told it to a dead man."

"Not yet dead, brother," Ta-wan-ne-ars corrected me gently. "We have still a long way to go—and we have our search."

"Which is like to lead us into the hands of—" I said rudely.

But De Veulle and three strange Frenchmen walked up at that moment, and Ta-wan-ne-ars was spared the necessity of an answer.

"'Tis well," De Veulle was saying. "We will rest the night, then. I'll lodge my prisoners in the stockade."

"And there is naught else?" asked one of the others.

"The letter to Pere Hyacinthe—don't forget that."

Whereat they all laughed with a kind of sinister mystery and cast glances of amusement at us.

The Cahnuagas drove us from the bank with kicks and blows of their paddle-blades, and the white men followed leisurely, laughing now and then as we dodged some particularly vicious attack upon our heads and faces. As it was, when we were flung into a bare log-walled room within the palisade we were covered with bruises. 'Twas the real beginning of our torment.

In the morning our arms were untied and we were given a mess of half-cooked Indian meal. Then the rawhides were rebound, and we set forth upon a trail that led from the river southeastward into the forest. A Cahnuaga walked behind each of us, tomahawk in hand. De Veulle himself brought up the rear, his musket always ready. If we hesitated on our pace or staggered, the savage nearest to us used the flat of his tomahawk or his musket-butt.

On the third day, shortly after noon, I was astonished to hear faintly, but very distinctly, a bell ringing in the forest.

"La Vierge du Bois welcomes you," hailed De Veulle from behind us. "The bell rings you in. Ah, there will be bright eyes and flushed cheeks at sight of you!"

He laughed in a pleasant, melodious way.

"White cheeks to flush for you, Ormerod, and red cheeks to grow dusky for our friend the chief here! What a fluttering of hearts there will be!"

Could I have wrenched my hands free I would have snatched a tomahawk from the Cahnuaga before me. But I did what Ta-wan-ne-ars did—held my head straight and walked as if I had not heard. Something told me the Seneca suffered as much as I.

We did not hear the bell again; but in mid-afternoon the forest ended upon the banks of a little river, and in the distance a wooden tower showed through the trees. As we drew nearer other buildings appeared, arranged in irregular fashion about a clearing. One of pretentious size stood by itself inside the palisade.

Cahnuagas, including women and children, swarmed along the trail with guttural cries. A big, red-headed man stepped from a building which was evidently a storehouse. 'Twas Boiling, and with a yell of delight he snatched a block of wood from the ground and hurled it at my head.

"Curse me, 'tis the renegade and his red shadow!" he shouted. "We are in great luck! Do but wait until Tom knows you are here, my friend. The stake awaits you!"

He walked beside us, rubbing his hands together in high glee, and discoursing with seemingly expert knowledge on the precise character of the various kinds of torment we should undergo.

His attentions drew a considerable crowd; and so when we entered the single rude street of the settlement 'twas to find the whole population awaiting us. The gate in the stockade around the big house was open, and with a thrill I realized that a swirl of color there meant Marjory. Murray's stately figure I identified at a distance.

I think she did not know me at first. There was no reason why she should. My leather garments were rent and torn, my hair was tangled and matted with briars and thorns from the underbrush, my face was scratched and bleeding. I was thin and gaunt, and I might not walk upright, although I tried, for the rawhide thongs bowed by shoulders.

But Murray knew me instantly, and a flare of exultation lighted his face. De Veulle halted us directly in front of the gate.

"An old acquaintance has consented to visit us," he said.

And with a shock of grief I saw comprehension dawn in Marjory's face. But she did not flush crimson as De Veulle had prophesied. She blanched white. I knew by that she had been long enough at La Vierge du Bois to appreciate the temper of its inhabitants.

"I seem to recollect the tall Indian beside our friend, likewise," observed Murray.

"'Tis his companion of the interview at Cawston's in New York," rejoined De Veulle. "What, Mistress Marjory, you have not forgotten the rash youth who was always threatening or badgering us?"

Her lips moved mechanically, but 'twas a minute before she could force her voice to obey.

"I remember," she said.

Murray took snuff precisely and addressed himself to me.

"You are a dangerous youth, Master Ormerod. You had opportunity to win free of your past misdemeanors, you will allow, yet you would hear none of my advice. No, you must mix in affairs which did not concern you. And as I warned you, it hath been to your sore prejudice. Much as I—"

Marjory flung out her arms in a gesture of appeal.

"Why do you talk so much, sir?" she cried. "What have you in mind? This man is an Englishman! Is he to be given up to the savages?"

Murray surveyed her gravely.

"Tut, tut, my dear! Is this the way to conduct in public? 'Given up to the savages,' forsooth! The young man is a traitor, a renegade—and a sorry fool into the bargain. He hath meddled in matters beyond his comprehension or ability. We must reckon up the harm he hath done, and assess his punishment in proportion."

"Just what do you mean by that, sir?" she demanded coldly.

"Frankly, my dear lass, I cannot tell you as yet."

"I think you mock me," she asserted. "And I may tell you, sir, I will be party to no such crime to humanity. You talk of traitors. I am wondering if there is more than one meaning to the word."

She turned with a flutter of garments and sped into the house. De Veulle eyed Murray rather quizzically, but the arch-conspirator gave no evidence of uneasiness.

"You shall tell me about it," he said, as if nothing had happened. "Meantime I suppose they may be lodged with the Keepers."

"Yes," agreed De Veulle; "but I desire to give some particular instructions for their entertainment."

"Do so; do so, by all means," answered Murray equably. "But wait; here comes Pere Hyacinthe."

The Indians surrounding us huddled back, cringing against the stockade, their eyes glued upon a tall, thin figure in a threadbare black cassock of the Jesuit order. He walked with a peculiar halting gait. His face was emaciated, the skin stretched taut over prominent bones. His eyes blazed out of twin caverns.

change for her ticket of admission."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Humorous Episode the Result of Tardiness

Absentmindedness, that classic affliction of college professors, is an impartial ailment which does not restrict itself to any class of individuals, as was proven at a recent meeting held in one of the city's hotels.

A young lady, arriving shortly after the meeting was called to order, became embarrassed at her tardiness and, when called upon for her ticket of admission at the door, handed the required pastboard to the ticket-taker and hurried to her seat.

Shortly afterward the chairman of the meeting called for order and explained that he had a short announcement to make. "If Miss Smith will call at the door, on her way out," said the chairman, "we will be glad to return her automobile license in ex-

Pianists' Hand-Stretches

The difficulty of some of Liszt's compositions for the piano is perhaps explained in part by the fact that his own hand-stretch was unusually big. He could easily stretch an octave with his thumb and first finger. Rubinstein also had a phenomenal reach. On the other hand, there are well-known pianists today whose natural stretch between thumb and little finger is barely an octave; yet by constant and careful practice, and by a wise choice of music for performances, they have established themselves in the estimation of audiences, who are rarely aware of the handicap.

CHIC BLACK AND WHITE MODES; TAILORED SUITS FOR MATRON

NO MORE remarkable success for the black-and-white vogue has ever been recorded in the pages of history than that now registering throughout the realm of fashion. The two "studies in black and white" as here illustrated are highly typical of the reigning mode.

We are in the midst of an era of sleeveless jackets, such as the one which achieves assured smartness for the costume shown here to the left. Full white sleeves for the under-blouse and a plaited skirt of white crepe, the latter bordered with black satin to match the jacket, interpret style in every sense of the word.

The bloused styling of the black-and-white frock to the right is also outstanding this season. White is introduced in a full vestee and in a panel and borderings on the skirt. The hat which this stylishly clad young woman is wearing expresses utmost millinery chic. It is one of the new snug-fitting earlap types. For the younger set these tight molded-to-the-head shapes are quite the rage.

It is not possible to overemphasize the increasing importance of black-and-white. Not only does it occupy the center of the stage at this moment, but fabrics and accessories for the coming months all bear a message of continued favor for black-and-white combinations.

Among the prospects for summer are dresses which combine filmy black with white lace in their development. Lovely, too, are the new georgette must agree after studying the style points of the frock here pictured. While this dress has a slenderizing effect, yet fullness is introduced ever so adroitly in side panels held in place under scalloped arranged in tiers. All the scalloped are bound with crepe satin.

Another favorite frock for the matron is of black satin styled with one-side drapes, cascades falling both from the left shoulder and from waist line. These one-side fastenings and surprise effects are particularly becoming to mature figures, and they are the "last word" in the matter of dress fashioning.

The matron who has wearied of the regulation cloth suit will find relief this spring in the way of silk or satin tailored suits and ensembles. These feature skirts with plaits somewhere in their making, topped with jacks which, while they are neatly tailored, maintain a charming feminized styling. Because of the black-and-prints showing a white background trellised over with huge black roses and other floral patternings. White shoes inlaid with black kid and vice versa will add a beauty note to the black-and-white ensemble.

That Paris so enthusiastically indorses the all-black vogue redounds to the good fortune of the matron. No mode is quite so distingue white enthusiasm now on, the blouse to wear under the jacket is preferably of white crepe or satin, although silk-print vestees are also in fashion.

Silk topcoats for spring, also says the mode, either bengaline, faille or satin. They show intriguing details of pintucks, folds, seamwork and some are quilted. JULIA BOTTOMLEY. (©, 1927, Western Newspaper Union.)

A Mother's Standby!

Elkhart, Ind.—"I do not think I could have brought up my family and kept well if it were not for Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Whenever I began to get run-down or nervous, I would take a couple of bottles and was then all right. I found it especially beneficial during expectancy. It would keep me so well and feeling so good I never had any trouble. I also took it afterward to strengthen me. 'Favorite Prescription' is the very best medicine a woman can take during motherhood and as a tonic and builder at all times."—Mrs. Jennie Kull, 144 E. Marion St.

Grandmother Knew
there was nothing so good for gestation and colds as mustard. But the old-fashioned mustard plaster burned and blistered.
Musterole gives the relief and help that mustard plasters gave, without the plaster and without the blister.
It is a clean, white ointment, made with oil of mustard. Gently rub it in. See how quickly the pain disappears.
Try Musterole for sore throat, bronchitis, tonsillitis, croup, stiff neck, asthma, neuralgia, headache, congestion, pleurisy, rheumatism, lumbago, pains and aches of the back and joints, sprains, sore muscles, bruises, chilblains, frosted feet, colds of the chest (it may prevent pneumonia).

Response

No task, however small, can be properly undertaken without whole hearted interest. How important, then, is the need for exhaustive consideration in a note-worthy work such as is embraced in funeral services.

Our understanding in the profession assures this thoroughness, alone attested by client commendation.
